“When do I call a priest if I or a loved one is sick or dying?”

Part I: General Principles

Please do not wait until the person has died. This may seem obvious for some, or maybe not: the sacraments and blessings of the Church are only for the living. Once the person has gone to God a priest can only do what you can do, that is, pray for the deceased. So please, let your priest exercise his ministry, and call before death occurs. But the question still arises: When, exactly, should I call a priest?

For many older Catholics, it was drilled into them that you only called the priest when death was immanent: he came to give “Last Rites” or “Extreme Unction.” Extreme Unction literally means, “extreme anointing;” extreme in the sense that it was given at one extreme of life: the end. However, the Holy Spirit reminded the Council Fathers at Vatican II that this powerful sacrament has a much broader application.

The Biblical letter of St. James instructs the Church that it raises up the sick faithful and saves them (cf. James 5:14-15). It is for the Christian faithful who are seriously impaired by illness or old age. To show this change of focus, this sacrament is now called the Sacrament of the Sick or the Anointing of the Sick. The general norm is that one “whose health is seriously impaired by sickness or old age” can and should receive this sacrament. (Bl. Pope Paul VI’s Apostolic Constitution, Sacrament of the Anointing of the Sick, #8.)

Members of the Church are exhorted throughout the New Testament to associate themselves with the Passion and death of Jesus (cf. Rom. 8:17, Col. 1:24, 2 Tim. 2:11-12, and 1 Peter 4:13). The seriously ill and the elderly can be united to the suffering Christ in a unique and personal way. The Anointing of the Sick gives the grace not only to bear suffering bravely, but also to fight against it. It gives God’s help during an anxious time, when one’s spirit as well as one’s body can be sorely tried. The sacrament gives the grace of the Holy Spirit to the whole person, body and soul. In the celebration of this sacrament, faith is manifested and made actual, both in the priest who administers it, but especially in the one who receives it. The person is saved by personal faith, as well as the faith of the Church, which looks back to the Passion, death, and Resurrection of Jesus as the saving event, and looks forward in hope to the full manifestation of the Reign of God that is pledged in the sacraments.

There do remain, however, special prayers and rites for the dying. These “Last Rites” for those near death include, but are not limited to, the Sacrament of the Sick.

Continued....

For example, the Apostolic Pardon is given only to the dying. Not only does it forgive the person’s sins, but it releases her or him from the punishment of sin after death. It presumes that the one receiving it would go to Confession (the normal manner Christ established for the forgiveness of sins) if he or she were able. The Apostolic Pardon is a particular comfort and grace for someone near death who is unable to speak or otherwise communicate: for example, someone who is unconscious, in a coma, or in the late stages of dementia. Another example is the reception of Holy Communion as Viaticum. It is viaticum, and not the Anointing of the Sick, that the Church understands as the last sacrament of Christian life. To receive Jesus in the Eucharist in the final moments of this earthly life is a pledge of resurrection and the food for the passage through death. As such, it can be received daily, as long as the dying person is able.
